

Pop Festival Hailed by Toronto Fans

TORONTO (AP) — Tiny Tim sang "Tiptoe Through the Tulips" and waved his ukulele at more than 27,000 screaming fans.

Texan Johnny Winter twanged his blue guitar and got four standing ovations.

The Blood, Sweat and Tears rock group didn't bleed and they didn't weep—but they doubtless contributed some perspiration with their rhythmic rock.

All in all, the two-day, $200,000 Toronto Pop festival was termed a success by organizers Ken Walker, 23, and John Brower, 22.

"Not to plan an even bigger festival next year would deprive many beautiful Toronto people of something they obviously enjoy," said both.
